Control

CHINESE BOMBARDED

Independent Regime Established at Tsitsihar Under
Chang Chin-Hui

TOKYO, Nov. 20.—Pursuing scattered detachments of the defeated Heilungkiang army in Northern Manchuria, Japanese scouting airplanes today swept 150 miles west of Tsitsihar, now under complete Japanese military control.

A dispatch from Harbin said that 3000 Chinese infantrymen were bombarded at Hailun, 100 miles north of Harbin, in an effort to prevent a concentration of General Ma Chan-Shan's forces at the northern terminus of the Harbin-Hailun Railway. The Chinese were believed to have suffered heavy casualties.

As Ma Chan-Shan himself withdrew into the Hailun area, it was thought the troops who were bombed might have been part of the Chinese General's personal forces.

Ma Chan-Shan's plan, according to Harbin advices, was to establish his Heilungkiang government at some point north of Harbin, as he still claims the provincial governorship despite his defeat by the Japanese in their occupation of Anganki and Tsitsihar.

An independent regime has been set up at Tsitsihar, it was understood here, under the leadership of Chang Chin-Hui, the Governor of Harbin. He left for Tsitsihar as soon as the city fell to the Japanese, and with the approval of the Japanese military authorities, proclaimed Heilungkiang Province independent of the central government of China at Nanking.

MUKDEN, Nov. 20.—Henry Pu-Yi, "boy emperor" of China, was forced to flee today from Tankantze Hot Springs when a mob of mounted Chinese bandits invaded the resort and terrorized the inhabitants.

Japanese military headquarters here learned that 140 bandits descended on Tankantze, and that Pu-Yi, fearing for his life, fled hurriedly to Dairin.

Pu-Yi, who had been living in Tientsin under Japanese protection, came to Manchuria last week in connection with a movement to make him Emperor of Manchuria. The plans did not materialize as scheduled, but Pu-Yi's supporters have grown more confident, since the fall of Tsitsihar, that the Manchu dynasty may be restored.

Newspaper Carriers' Scrap Aired in Municipal Court

Two men were held in $500 bail each early last evening as the result of an argument as to who was to serve a Philadelphia newspaper in Croydon. The hearing was held before Justice Laughlin in the Municipal Building here and the attorneys for both the defense and the prosecution argued back and forth for quite some time.

It was charged that on November 13th Morris and Samuel Muldovsky, Rockledge, Pa., who had been the authorized agents for the newspaper had been succeeded by Charles Lewis Bridgewater, because of a disputed account.

Lewis charged that the Muldovskys father and son, stole some of his papers, pointed a gun at him and William Johnson, Croydon, his helper, and followed them about the town making threats to kill. It was also alleged that there was one blow struck which landed on Johnson's chin.

Ludwig Trejar, Croydon, also testified that Muldovsky had threatened his son, who is now delivering the paper in Croydon.

Morris Muldovsky was held in $500 bail on the larceny and receiving stolen goods charge and Samuel Muldovsky was held in the same amount on the charges of pointing a gun, at tempting to kill and assault and battery.

Art Exhibit is Arranged At Bensalem High School

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Nov. 20.—An art exhibit will occur at the Bensalem Township high school Tuesday evening, when a splendid collection of 150 fine prints, reproduced direct from the originals, will be shown.

This is the first artistic exhibit ever to be displayed here. The originals are in some of the most famous art galleries in the world. The exhibits are arranged by the teachers and will be open to the public at 7.30.

Mrs. Lewis M. Treude, of 1409 Pond street, was a guest one day this week of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy, of Lansdowne.

Expect Crowded House At Benefit Performance

Indications point to a crowded house on Monday afternoon at the Grand Theatre when a showing of the feature, "The Star Witness," is to be given for the benefit of the Central Relief Committee of Bristol.

The offer to give this benefit came unsolicited on the part of the Central Committee and was voluntarily made by Edward Lynn, manager of the theatre. It is one of many benefit performances to be given throughout the nation under the auspices of the motion picture industry.

All of the box office receipts are to be turned over to the Central Relief Committee.

A tense courtroom scene is dramatically presented in "The Star Witness." In it, Walter Huston appears as the District Attorney, prosecuting a murderer whose fate depends upon the testimony of an old Grand Army veteran, the character played by Charles (Chic) Sale. More than four hundred persons appear in this scene. The picture was directed by William Wellman who recently did "Night Nurse" and "The Public Enemy."

TRENTON SOCIETY AT THE OSBORNE HOUSE

Members Are Guests of The Morrisville School Board

COLLATION IS SERVED

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 20.—Members of the Trenton Historical Society broke a precedent last evening, repairing to the other side of the Delaware in Morrisville, where an adjourned meeting was held at the Osborne House, one of the most historic buildings on the Pennsylvania shore. The society members were guests of the Morrisville School Board.

The Rev. Dr. Hamilton Schuyler, president of the society, introduced Lewis R. Bond, Dr. Ralph M. Fox, vice-president of the Morrisville education board, and Mayor Thomas B. Stockham, of Morrisville.

Mr. Bond, who is engaged in the writing of a comprehensive history of Morrisville and its environs, gave an account of the house's history from earliest times, while Dr. Fox and Mayor Stockham told of the plans and labors connected with the restoration of the historic place. The Osborne House, which is now an historic shrine as well as useful building for educational purposes, was owned in turn by two signers of the Declaration of Independence—Robert Morris and George Clymer. George Washington, the Marquis de Lafayette and General Sullivan, of Revolutionary fame, were among those entertained under its roof.

During the meeting a committee originally named in connection with the George Washington bi-centennial celebration was delegated to call upon the Trenton City Commission before the end of this month, for the purpose of bringing to the attention of the Commission a plan for celebrating Washington's triumphal tour through Trenton on his way to become inaugurated President of the United States. On this committee are Dr. Schuyler, John J. Cleary, Francis Potter, Howard L. Hughes and Leo A. Smith.

Following the meeting, a collation was served in a room which was formerly the bed-chamber of Revolutionary notables. The luncheon was prepared by domestic science students of the Morrisville High School.

Man of 79 is Injured When Hit by Automobile

A 79-year-old man, Lewis Falanky, of Germantown Road, Philadelphia, is being treated in the Harriman Hospital for injuries suffered when struck by an automobile at Andalusia last evening.

Mr. Falanky has a lacerated and contused wound of the right side of his head, requiring eight stitches; contused wounds over the right eye and on both hands. He likewise suffered from shock.

The accident occurred as Falanky, who is employed at the Michell Seed Company's plant at Andalusia, was walking along the highway to board a trolley car. He was struck by an automobile operated by Grayson White, of 1018 Wood street, Bristol. The character of the weather is believed to have hindered Falanky and White from seeing each other.

LARGE TURKEY AUCTION AT PERKASIE PREDICTS LOWEST PRICES FOR THANKGIVING BIRDS IN FIFTEEN YEARS; FIRST CHOICE 34c A POUND

Seventy Cents Paid Less Than Ten Years Ago for Choice
Fowls — Dressed Turkeys in Philadelphia and Suburban
Towns Expected to Be About 43 Cents per Pound

PERKASIE, Nov. 20.—Thanksgiving turkeys will be cheaper this year than any time in 15 years if the prices brought yesterday at Bucks county's largest turkey auction here are any criterion.

This is welcome news for Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen for it was not many years back that the presence of the festive bird on the Thanksgiving table was a sign of a plenteous exchequer that was not disputed.

When you paid 70 cents a pound for first choice birds—and that was less than 10 years ago—your reputation as a wealthy citizen was established, but with the general order of things, the price of turkeys has dropped this year with the price of some other eatables.

At the turkey auction yesterday at the stockyards of Scheetz and Gulick, first class birds in the first lot of 100 sold, brought 34 cents a pound "on the hoof," which means live weight. In the second lot of 100 birds, the first-choice dropped to 32½ cents a pound, the lowest price in fifteen years.

This means that dressed turkeys in Philadelphia and suburban towns will sell in the neighborhood of 43 cents a pound to the consumer for the best available birds.

Second-choice birds at the auction, where 2000 were offered for sale, brought 31½ cents a pound. Third-choice birds brought 29 cents a pound and the "scrubs" or fourth-choice birds dropped to 26½ cents a pound. This means that good turkeys, taking the first and second-choice birds, at prices brought at the Perkasia auction, will be dressed and sold to the consumer for Thanksgiving anywhere from 40 to 43 cents a pound, and that third and fourth choice birds will sell retail from 38 to 40 cents a pound to the consumer.

Chickens at the auction sold yesterday from 23 to 25 cents a pound live weight.

Over in Hatfield, which was formerly the turkey center of the eastern section of Pennsylvania, where auctions attracted thousands of buyers annually, Milton E. Benner, veteran "turkey king," placed 2000 birds on sale at the South Hatfield stockyards, at private sale at 35 cents a pound live weight.

First-choice birds at the Perkasia auction brought four cents a pound less yesterday than they did a year ago and 9 cents a pound less than in 1929.

Not all of the 2000 birds were sold at the Perkasia auction yesterday. About 200 people were in attendance but the bidding was slow and at one time during the sale, Auctioneer Kern, of Pennsylvania, threatened to stop the sale if higher prices were not bid. There were many well-known poultry dealers, butchers and retail meat store merchants from Bucks, Philadelphia, Lehigh, Northampton, Delaware and Chester county in attendance.

The turkeys were sold "on the hoof."

They were auctioned in lots of one hundred. The birds were in a large field and were sold by first, second and third choice bids.

One old-timer at the Perkasia auction, who has been attending sales for many years, said that he remembered a sale just twenty-five years ago yesterday when turkeys "on the hoof" brought six cents a pound. At that time, he said, turkeys sold dressed at fifteen, eighteen and twenty cents a pound. Half a dozen others bore this veteran out in this statement.

Turkeys are quite plentiful this year and many Bucks county farms have been raising their own birds. One farm near Doylestown has over 100 fine home-grown birds, well fed and fattened for the Thanksgiving season. Practically all of them have been ordered at a small roadside stand in front of the farm house by the motorists who pass by daily.

Turkeys at the Perkasia and Hatfield sales were raised in Maryland and West Virginia, where the North Penn and Bucks county dealers make annual trips to bring back thousands of birds. Several local stores that handle turkeys, this year sent buyers to Maryland and West Virginia to purchase a number of the festive birds. Upon arrival in Bucks county the birds are fattened up for final dressing.

MUMMERS' PARADE MAY NOT BE HELD IN 1932

Philadelphia Council Eliminates Donation From Its Budget

DEBATE IS HEATED ONE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—The Mummer's annual New Year pageant on Broad street, a Philadelphia institution for over thirty years, may not be held January 1, 1932, because of City Council's action in eliminating $35,000, out of which cash prizes, approximating $30,000, would be awarded, from the city-county budget for next year.

The item for "Celebrating New Year's Eve and Day" and included in the budget appropriation requested by the Clerk of Council was stricken out early last evening by vote of a majority of the Councilmen present, as part of the municipal economy program to prevent a large increase in the city tax rate for 1932.

Following this action, H. Bart McHugh, director of the pageant, declared that unless funds for prizes are made available from private sources there will be no parade this year.

The striking out of the appropriation by Council was preceded by a heated debate, in which a sharp division occurred for the first time in the delegation of the 1st Councilmanic district, South Philadelphia, from which the New Year "shooters" sprang almost a century ago.

Edwin R. Cox, president of Council, who lives in the 36th ward, argued and voted to eliminate the $35,000 entirely. Councilman Charles J. Pomeroy, 1st ward, and Bernard Samuel, 39th ward, who in recent years has been grand marshal of the Mummer's parade, astride a big white horse, pleaded in vain for a New Year's appropriation, even if the amount was reduced to $20,000 or $25,000.

GRANDI IN NEW YORK

New York City, Nov. 20.—Dino Grandi, Foreign Minister of Italy, arrived in New York this morning to receive the official greeting of the city of New York.

An army of police lined Broadway as the official party moved up Broadway through the sky-scrapers towards the city hall. The reception was marred by a fog and light drizzle.

$100,000 FIRE AT TYRONE

Tyrone, Pa., Nov. 20.—Two firemen were overcome, and damage estimated at $100,000 resulted from a fire which swept the building occupied by Garmon & Sons, one of the largest dry goods stores in central Pennsylvania.

Buildings adjoining the Garmon block on either side occupied by the Tyrone Herald, afternoon newspaper and the John Fisher Hardware Company, were damaged by smoke and water.

The Herald estimated its damage at $3,000 while the Hardware Company suffered damage amounting to $5,000.

HOOVER MAINTAINS SILENCE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—Only silence emanated from the White House today concerning Senator Hiram Johnson's blunt invitation to President Hoover to retire from the presidential race next year "for the good of the party."

Mr. Hoover made no comment, but his friends did, and they were highly indignant about it. Their discussions today hinged about ways and means of off-setting the effect of the Californian's colossal suggestion.

Interesting Meeting of Edgely P. T. A. is Held

EDGELY, Nov. 20.—The meeting of the Edgely Parent-Teacher Association was called to order by the president, F. T. Voit, last evening.

During the regular business, a motion was made to stage a Christmas party for the benefit of all the children of the school.

Delegates were appointed to attend the county P. T. A. meeting at Morrisville tomorrow, between 1.30 and 4 p. m., at which time election of officers will take place.

Entertainment committee put on a program under the supervision of Miss Edna Pennypacker, which was enjoyed by all present. Program included: Thanksgiving hymn; chorus of 7th and 8th grade pupils; dramatic sketch of "Miles Standish"—characters: Miles Standish, Howard Baker; John Alden, John Dick; Indian, Clayton Bintliff; Priscilla, Emma Dager.

A card party will be held at the home of Mrs. Grace on December 10, or the benefit of the P. T. A. After the meeting adjourned the refreshment committee served coffee and cake to all.

GUILD AT NEWPORTVILLE HAS GARMENT INCREASE

Total at Annual Display Yesterday is 357; Gain of 98

WOMEN ARE SPEAKERS

NEWPORTVILLE, Nov. 20.—The annual display of garments of Newportville Branch, Needlework Guild of America, was held in the basement of the Newportville Church yesterday afternoon.

There was a large attendance. The meeting was opened by prayer. The president, Mrs. Helen L. Birkey, gave an address and introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Wilson, president of the Needlework Guild of Tacoma. Mrs. Wilson gave a very interesting address, telling how the guild was started in the United States. She said that a pamphlet was sent to the United States from England, setting forth the principles of the guild, but added that we have no connection with the English guild.

The next speaker was Mrs. Henry E. Ancker, president of the Bristol guild. She also gave a very interesting talk on guild work.

The display consisted of 357 garments, an increase of 98 over last year. Refreshments were served.

Eight-Year-Old Boy To Be Buried Tomorrow

CROYDON, Nov. 20.—Jack R., the eight-year old son of Levi and Minnie Roston, died here yesterday. The Roston family resides at Second avenue and State Road.

Funeral service, to which relatives and friends are invited, will be held tomorrow at two p. m., from the Roston home, with interment in Bristol Cemetery. Friends may call this evening.

Mrs. Lovett Conducts Successful Card Party

On Wednesday evening, the P. O. of A. lodge held a card party in the P. A. Hall, Radcliffe street. Mrs. Sophia Lovett was chairlady. A delightful evening was spent playing pinocle and "500," and eight tables of players were arranged.

Many pretty and useful prizes were awarded to the winners, who were as follows: Howard Appleton, 818; Mrs. Bessie Campbell, 785; Mrs. John Brunen, 755; Mrs. May Appleton, 745; Mrs. Sophia Lovett, 734; M. Thomas, 715; J. Vito, 693; Mrs. Rilla Hunter, 690; Harry Goheen, 680; Mrs. Charles Mummy, 665; Mrs. Anna Hughes, 646; Mrs. Mary Frantz, 634; Madeline Ritter, 634; Mrs. Edward Renk, 632; Mrs. A. Nills, 540; Charles Mummy, 521; Mrs. Calhoun, 506.

The winners in the game of "500" were: Mrs. A. Britton, 2750; Mrs. Ida Appleton, 2110; Mrs. E. Burton, 1910; Mrs. Warren Thompson, 1570.

Refreshments were also sold during the evening.

SUSPENDS SENTENCE ON EXCHANGE EDITOR

Mock Trial is Big Feature at Exchange Club Meeting

FLOWERS PRESENTED

Despite the strong dramatic plea of George F. Hess, attorney for the defense of Doron Green, admitted editor of the so-called scurrilous sheet, "The Exhilarator," the Exchange Club weekly, Judges "Jim" Guy, "Dave" Landreth and George Fox, the great tribunal, found the defendant guilty of a willful and premeditated attempt to besmirch and defame the characters of George Irvin, Charles Bowen and John Wear, fellow Exchangeites.

What an array of legal talent representing both sides, battling every moment of the trial, hurling insults at one another and tearing the witnesses to pieces in their efforts to score a legal point in the famous case of "Green vs. Irvin, Bowen and Wear."

Such was the scene presented at the weekly meeting of the Bristol Exchange Club held in the Elks' Home last night for the amusement of the members and to say they were amused is putting it mildly.

So realistic was the trial conducted that at times, one was afraid Mr. Green would get "life."

After listening to the biting sarcasm of "Pam" Minister, the witty sallies of "Will" Fine, attorneys for the prosecution, and the serious pleas of "Wes" Spencer, for the defense, Editor Green was lucky he didn't get the electric chair.

On imposing sentence the trio of great Judges took into consideration the fact that the editor of the Exchange paper was serious in his efforts to make the service club an organization of which every member would be proud and therefore suspended sentence and put the costs of the case on the prosecution and presented the defendant with a large bouquet of flowers, thus ending one of Bristol's most sensational trials.

WILLS PROBATED IN HARRISON AND McELROY ESTATES

Several Estates of Interest to Lower Bucks Countians
Settled

WALLER ESTATE, $25,000

Late W. P. Winner, Quaker-town, Leaves $25,000
Estate to Wife

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 20.—Numerous wills have been filed here in estates of deceased residents of lower Bucks County. Among them are the following:

Estate of Jacob Johnson, of Newtown, letters to Wesley Johnson and Wilmer E. Leedom; estate of Edward McElroy, of Bristol, letters to Mary McElroy, $2000; estate of John T. Harrison, of Bristol, letters to Julia L. Harrison, $6500; estate of Cecelia Stilwell, of Bensalem letters to the People's National Bank and Trust Company, of Langhorne, $600.

Letters of administration filed in the estate of Anton Pinnel, of Perkasia, were granted to Magdalena Pinnel, amounting to $500. Horace M. Freas was granted the letters of administration filed in the estate of M. Gladys Freas, of Bensalem township, and Assistant District Attorney J. Leslie Kilcoyne, of Bristol, was granted the letters in the estate of Mollie Grossman, of Bristol, which was filed for probate.

Inventories were filed in the estate of the late Phoebe Anna Carver, of Langhorne, valued at $5087.87, and Levinus Maurer, of Richland township, valued at $5926.25.

Two sons, Howard W. Flack and Joseph F. Ack, both of whom gave their residence as Doylestown, were nequeathed the estate of the late Roland Flack, of Warwick township, who died at his sister-in-law's home here on November 5, estimated at $24,000 according to his will probated yesterday. It was executed in February, 1930, at Jamison and named his sons as executors.

Robert A. Radcliffe, of East Ashland street, named his widow, Emaline Hoffman Radcliffe, as executor, bequeathing her the entire estate.

Among the other wills filed for probate were those of Mary Waller, of Morrisville, and William P. Winner, of Quakertown. The former, according to her will temporarily resided near Denver, Colorado, and named as heirs to her estate, which was estimated at $25,000 and upwards, her daughter, Eva Wallace Lovett, and grandchildren, who, she directed in special paragraphs shall receive funds equally divided when the Girard Trust Company distributes them.

The latter, who died on October 13, bequeathed his $25,000 estate to his wife, Mary M. Winner, the sole heir.

HATS OFF TO BUCKS

(North Penn Reporter)

The war against the criminal knows no end and the success of the forces of law and order depend entirely on the vigor and constance with which it is prosecuted.

With this simple preface, The Reporter once more expresses his whole-souled admiration for the manner in which Bucks County handles its criminal business.

Within the year two raids by Philadelphia desperados were attempted in the Founder's County.

In March motor bandits swooped down on a bank in Chalfont and got away with something less than $3,000. A bit later a similar scheme was frustrated in Bristol when a courageous woman set off a burglar alarm.

In neither case was anyone hurt and the loss was not sufficient to disturb insurers. Two incidents in crime annals such as police and prosecutors have come to consider inevitable and too trivial to warrant extensive pursuit.

Not so in Bucks. A state policeman and a county detective took the trail at once, which is usual, and they held it till they got their men, which is not so common.

There is something reminiscent of the Canadian Royal Constabulary of pre-prohibition days in the performance turned in by Sergeant William Francis and Detective Russo in the bank case.

There also is something peculiarly heartening in the announcement that "the four men will be indicted at the December term of the Bucks County criminal court, and that they may be brought to Bucks after their present terms expire, and tried."

That all are in prison now for other crimes might satisfy less exacting counties. Crimes committed in Bucks must be expiated in Bucks. Criminals are correspondingly careful about their behavior while in that county.

ADVICE

The cheapest commodity in this world is advice. That's why so many people give it away.

Advice should be something to keep until asked for.

We all need suggestions to guide us along the way. But advice should be sought or else its power for helpfulness becomes doubtful.

You see, advice that you give to someone else may have been thought out as good advice for yourself but turn out to be the worst possible for another.

Circumstances often wither the best of advice so that it is in the way.

To keep one's mouth shut is an accomplishment both rare and refreshing.

The lawyer sells his advice. And the client gladly pays a great sum to his lawyer because he has faith in his advice.

There are so many things that we could give away and which would make other people very happy, so that advice really takes a back seat and is of little importance excepting when highly cultivated through experience or special study and research.

How many times we have given our advice only to see it come back to us in a very unhappy state of mind and full of blame.

But kindness, generous impulses that have been put to action, sincere love, encouragement, inspiring words, never come back except when they return with interest compounded again and again.

Seek advice, but do not give it.

IDLE DOLLARS

Depression—panicky Americans have hoarded nearly a billion dollars, almost one-fifth of the nation's outstanding currency. With a credit ratio to money of 10 to one that means 10 billion dollars in credit has been withdrawn from trade.

Money hoarders not only prolong the depression, wreck banks, swell the army of unemployed and cause financial panics, but they rob themselves. Nor is it only the hoarder, whose treasure vanishes in burning buildings or through a jimmied window, who loses. What of the millions being lost in interest?

Loss of confidence in banks and investments does not justify the hoarding of one's savings, nor does it necessitate such shortsighted steps. There are still safe investments.

What of the postal savings bank? It will accept individual deposits up to $2,500 and will pay interest on them. And back of all deposits in this "bank" are the credit and resources of the United States Government. Money deposited there is just as safe as the money itself, for no money is stronger than the government that issues it.

Postal savings serve a dual purpose. They relieve the mind of the depositor and keep money in circulation at a time when it is greatly needed. Many must have learned this, judging from the tremendous increase in these deposits this year.

An idea for an unusual character, in one of the many Worthington novels, would be a private who took along an alarm clock.

"The CZARINA'S RUBIES" by Sidney Warwick

READ THIS FIRST

Frank Severn has been kidnaped from his country place, Beggar's Court, where his lawyer, Felix Sant, takes charge. Jim Wynter and his friend, Bill Grayson, search the place and find a hidden stairway and a locked door in the ruins of an ancient chapel. They begin to suspect Sant of being in league with the kidnapers when a wall "accidentally" falls, blocking this door, and become convinced of it when they find in his desk an anonymous letter addressed to Wynter, which obviously had been held up because it gave warning that Sant was not to be trusted.

Grayson, his wife, Wynter and Katharine Faring take a house, Manorsway, near Beggar's Court. Katharine is the rightful owner of the missing Czarina Rubies by inheritance from her Russian grandfather, and Severn had tried to recover them for her.

Martin, Severn's servant, and a thug named Frome make a vain attempt to assassinate Wynter, and Grayson calls in a Scotland Yard detective. At Beggar's Court Wynter meets Helen Blair, whom he likes, although she is the stepdaughter of mysterious Dr. Martell who, Wynter is convinced, is in the plot against Severn.

NOW GO ON

CHAPTER XLVII

"How do you do, Miss Blair? Mr. Sant promised us a surprise—and it's a very pleasant surprise."

"My stepfather and I happened to be in Trayne and ran across Mr. Sant there who kindly asked us to dinner tonight," Helen Blair told him. "I hope you are feeling all right again, Mr. Wynter?"

Jim laughed. Less than a week ago that he had awakened in a strange house after that exciting night at Monksilver—but it seemed almost like long past history now, so much had happened since then.

"I'd almost forgotten that crack on the head that was my introduction to you," he said, "though I haven't forgotten your kindness."

Her kindness, he was sure, had been disinterested enough, even if the same could not have been said for Dr. Martell.

As Bill shook hands with Helen Blair, Sant explained the other guest's temporary absence.

"I happened to mention at dinner that Martin seems decidedly off color and Dr. Martell very kindly offered to see if anything was really the matter with him."

"Oh, our sharpshooter friend, Martin, is off his oats, is he?" inquired Bill.

"Well, his floundering into the estuary didn't do him any particular good," Sant said with a humorous shrug. "Only a just retribution, of course, as I told Martin; still the map seems to have a bit of a temperature and is feeling rather sorry for himself."

"I'm afraid Martin's troubles leave me somewhat cold, Sant—no doubt I have a callous nature!" observed Jim with a laugh. He turned to Helen Blair. "Didn't I hear the gramophone as we drove up?"

"Yes. I found some wonderful violin records here and I couldn't resist trying one or two of them over," she told him.

"Chanson Triste," that last one, wasn't it?" Jim asked.

He had caught the closing notes of that violin record, floating out into the misty night as they came up the drive, to bring him a sudden odd thrill.

And simultaneously he saw a hand creep out between the drawn curtains behind her.

great concert hall on Broadway, that had become famous almost in a night, was to come to mean to him. That record just played had been made by a master of the violin; yet for Jim Wynter at least it seemed uninspired by comparison as he remembered how Katharine had once played that same wordless song . . . and—the pitiful poignant tragedy of it—would never play it again.

"Oh, that thing of Tchaikovsky's? I remember it used to be a favorite of poor Frank's," said Sant.

"It's a favorite of mine, too. Does any one mind if we put it on again," Jim asked.

"I should love to hear it again," cried Helen.

"You know, I called yesterday at your house," Jim told her, as he and Helen walked across the room to the gramophone, leaving Bill and the older man sitting by the fire—just to express my appreciation of the hospitality I had received. But I was told that both you and Dr. Martell were away from home."

"Oh, I am sorry. We were in Trayne. We have been staying there for a day or two with a friend of my stepfather's."

From the beginning of their odd introduction in that house at Staines Jim had liked Helen Blair. And that first impression remained, whilst something in her face, that he could understand now as he had not understood before, made him sorry for the girl whose guardian, Dr. Martell was. He could not help being struck by a haunting sadness that her eyes seemed to hold. Was her stepfather the cause?

Jim remembered her startled involuntary cry, the expression in her face as of something more than mere impersonal horror when he had spoken of the murder he had come upon at Monksilver . . . remembered too the cowed shrinking fear her eyes had betrayed as Martell had harshly silenced her.

ENIGMA

How much did this girl know or suspect of that hidden side of her stepfather's life? Enough perhaps for his sudden news of that crime to have broken on her with a startling terrible significance?

Folding doors divided what had originally been one great room, with heavy velvet curtains screening them, crossed to this further end of

By HARRISON CARROLL.

Copyright, 1931, Premier Syndicate, Inc. HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 20.—
With the Pathe and R. K. O. studios in a state of jitters over the impending shake-up, David O. Selznick made what may be considered a prophetic statement when he said the two companies are very weak in directors and writers.

Mr. Selznick previously had sent Richard Dix's picture back to be re-written and cancelled a Lily Damita film entirely.

The young executive (he is only 30) has no plans for any particular type of story at R. K. O.

"No one can set any rules for stories," he says. "As an example, when 'The Divorce' was produced, the wise ones said the public was going sophisticated. Along came 'Merely Mary Ann' and 'Daddy Long Legs,' and these same ones reversed themselves to declare the public was tired of sophistication and wanted the homey, simple type of story."

"No one seems to take into account that both Norma Shearer and Janet Gaynor are box-office, regardless of what they happen to be in."

"I am going to pick stories that I think will appeal to audiences, independent of their type. Irving Thalberg follows this formula with great success. 'Strangers May Kiss,' 'Trader Horn' and hokum such as 'Hell Divers,' which is a great picture, certainly follow no set trend."

Selznick promises to build up the star rostrum, particularly in the development of new personalities. He considers Laurence Olivier and Joel McCrea good bets. Generally, he declares, it takes from four to six pictures to build up a comer into a feature name.

Asked about musicals, he said he favors the operetta type, such as "The Student Prince" and "The Merry Widow."

All Hollywood has its eyes on this young producer, who holds the fate of many destinies in his hands. When he and his wife, the former Irene Mayer, appeared at the Academy dinner, they were surrounded by well wishers.

MARIE'S REPLY.

One of the brighter moments at the Film Award banquet was when Marie Dressler rose to accept the gold statuette for the best performance of any actress during the year.

"I never felt so important," she said. And then, smiling toward

Vice President Curtis and his sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, she added: "I think Dolly Gann should give me her seat."

LATEST GOSSIP.

At this same dinner, Ivan Lebedeff lost a ruby from a ring that had been in his family for several generations. . . . Evelyn Brent and Harry Edwards celebrated their third wedding anniversary. They were married in Agua Caliente. . . . Joan Crawford and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., will take their vacation in Canada instead of New York. . . . Constance Lewis, Lois Wilson's youngest sister, is Connie Bennett's "stand-in" out at R. K. O. Pathe. Stanley Cortez, brother of Ricardo, is an assistant cameraman on the same set. . . . Buddy Rogers will appear in the Ziegfeld Follies after he finishes at Paramount. . . . Charles Farrell is learning to fly. . . . Claudette Colbert has returned from a week's recuperation at Palm Springs. . . . Seena Owen is back in town and looking grand. . . . While Samuel Goldwyn is in Europe, his chief assistant, Arthur Hornblow, will be in New York looking for plays, and his casting director, Robert McIntyre, will tour the country looking for talent.

LEW AYRES CAST.

After much debating, it has been decided to give Lew Ayres the masculine lead in "The Impatient Maiden," formerly "Impatient Virgin," by Donald Henderson Clark. The heroine is yet to be decided. James Whale, director of "Waterloo Bridge," will bring the story to the screen.

IN THE NEWS.

Columbia's newspaper story, "Final Edition," will have Mae

Clark as a sob sister. She was borrowed from Universal to play opposite Pat O'Brien, who takes a step up to become a city editor in this one. The story is about the murder of a newly appointed police commissioner, with the sob sister unraveling the crime. Pretty Mary Doran is another in the case. Dudley Nichols, an ex-World employee, wrote "Final Edition," and it will be produced by Ralph Block, also a former newspaperman. Maybe the much maligned press will get a fair break at last.

Pure food, pure milk, pure water—in all the things you eat or drink, you want absolute purity.

Purity counts in cigarettes, too

Making cigarettes as pure as they can be made is our business. And it's your business, too—because you smoke them.

All the materials that go into the making of CHESTERFIELD cigarettes are tested again and again by expert research chemists to see that they are absolutely clean and pure. Just like the things you eat or drink.

The tobacco is pure. The right kind—mild, sweet and ripe! Handled throughout by the most modern machinery.

The paper is pure. Clean. White. The best cigarette paper that money can buy.

There is cleanliness in every step of CHESTERFIELD's manufacture. Old-fashioned methods have been discarded, and CHESTERFIELDS are made and packed in modern sanitary factories where even the air is washed, and changed every four-and-one-half minutes.

Every day more men and women are changing to CHESTERFIELD. And changing for good! Four big reasons clinch the choice: Milder—Taste Better—Pure—Satisfy.

RECALLS INCIDENTS IN OLD BASEBALL DAYSBy Clyde Walker
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—"Modern baseball is better than that of the olden days, but we certainly did have some exciting games in the '80s and early '90s," said James Mutrie, "Grand Old Man of Baseball," and the first manager of the New York Giants.

"Do you see these crooked fingers? Well, I have had broken fingers, broken collar-bones, cracked jaws and numerous other injuries in my time. In those days we didn't have gloves, pads, masks, and all the good equipment that the boys have now. I remember that some of the first big games I ever played in were with home-made yarn balls and an axe-handle for a bat."

"I was born in Boston, June 17, 1855," continued Mutrie. "Our home was located in the shadow of the present monument on Bunker Hill. I started playing baseball in New England at 19. But I had no idea of taking it up as a profession."

"One of my earlier games shows the difficulties under which we struggled. I walked five miles to the field to pitch, and after it was over I walked the five miles back home. We won the game though—134 to 17."

"The game was advertised to start at 3.30, but because the Nationals' pitcher hadn't finished his meal the Nationals didn't appear on the field until 4 o'clock," continued Mutrie.

"As I told you, the people were very skeptical of ball games, and when they noticed the delay they immediately put up a cry: 'We want our money back!—throw Mutrie out of the grounds, the scoundrel!' They would have done it too if the other team hadn't appeared about then."

"Tickets were sold by agents along the 'Elevated,' which gave the holder transportation to and from the game and covered his admission—all for 35 cents."

"Our 'Mets' won the game by a score of 4 to 2."

"The fans were more respectful of the umpire's decisions then. Why, they even cheered the umpire. The players congratulated their opponents when they made a good play. Some awfully good men played on the old teams. My team has some big fellows. That is why I christened the team 'The New York Giants.'"

Mutrie retired from baseball in 1892 and started a hotel in Elmira, N. Y. He then moved to Staten Island, and has lived there since.

Mutrie follows the baseball today just about as closely as he ever did. He has a radio in his room, and he either sees or hears every big game.

"The good players of the period between 1880 and 1890 received $10 a week, board, and transportation, and were glad to get it," said Mutrie. "Sometimes a real good pitcher would get $15."

"Professional baseball had a hard name when I first entered it. People thought—sometimes rightly—that the games were 'fixed' and that it was a gambling enterprise. We had to labor under that handicap and try to prove to the public that ball games could be clean sport, and that it was no sin for the good brothers and sisters of the community to attend them."

The first recognition of Mutrie as a leader was when he organized the "New Yorks" to offer opposition to the "Unions," the pride of Brooklyn. This was but a trial thrust to feel out the possibilities of professional baseball. The undertaking was successful, so Mutrie induced August Belmont to lease him the Polo Grounds, at 110th Street and Fifth Avenue, New York.

With the lease in his pocket, Mutrie went on a hunt for a financial backer. Accidentally he met June Rankin, then the sports editor of the New York Herald. Rankin told him about John Day, who kept a cigar store in Maiden Lane. Jim went to see Day, and a partnership was formed which lasted for over a generation.

HULMEVILLE

Over the week-end Miss Margaret Perry, a student at West Chester State Teachers College, had as her guest at the school, Miss Charlotte Haas, of Lavndale.

A performance at the Locust Street Theatre was witnessed a few days ago by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Force, of Fairview avenue.

Visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Haefner, Main street, yesterday, were Rev. and Mrs. Walter H. Canon and son, of Paoli.

Rev. Francis E. Walz, pastor of Ne-shaminy M. E. Church, conducted funeral service for Mrs. Elizabeth Wiggins, wife of William H. Wiggins, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse C. Everitt, yesterday afternoon. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. John Brehm, Vance Betz, H. Sperling, Benjamin H. Jetter, William Wiggins, and George Wiggins. Interment of the late Mrs. Wiggins, who was a resident of Camden, N. J., was made in Beechwood Cemetery.

A number of residents of Hulmeville witnessed the presentation of "The Golden Bowl," a missionary pageant, at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, last evening.

CROYDON

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. William Black, of Pennsylvania avenue, entertained at a luncheon Mrs. William Wilkie, Mrs. Charles Friday, and Mrs. Albert Beale.

To Battle in Irish-U. of S. C. Classic

ORV MOHLER

MARCHMONT SCHWARTZ

CAPT. TOM YARR • CAPT. STAN WILLIAMSON

A gridiron classic to delight the heart of the rabid football fan will be the battle between Notre Dame and the University of Southern California on November 21 at South Bend. The Irish have torn through all opposition this season—with the exception of Northwestern, which game ended in a tie—and the U. of S. C. gridders are considered the most formidable opponents to face the great football machine to date. The game will feature a brilliant galaxy of the most colorful stars in both teams. Captain Tom Yarr of Notre Dame will lead the attack that he hopes will result in a repetition of the 27-6 victory scored last year over Southern California. With Joe Kurth at right tackle and Marchmont Schwartz in the half-back position, where he has played such perfect football that he is well in the running for the All-American, the Irish will take a lot of stopping. The Californians, too, have their stars, for Gus Shaver will be out there maintaining his reputation as one of the finest quarterbacks on the Coast. Captain Stan Williamson will, as usual, play the center position, where he will match brain and muscle with the doughty Mister Yarr. Then there is Orv Mohler, who has built up quite a name for himself as ball-carrier. Yes sir, it's going to be some game. The winner? Your guess is as good as anyone's.

FACTORS-TO-YOU
FURNITURE COMPANY

225 MILL STREET, BRISTOL

By HARRISON CARROLL.
Copyright, 1931, Frontier Syndicate, Inc.
HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.—Hollywood has its poets. Some of them, like Roland Young and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., find their way into print. Others, like Ellie Dove, are afraid of being laughed at. Today, I ran across several poems by Mae Clarke.

Here's one which the Universal star slungly titles: "Just a Bust."

"Just when I think I have the world by its tail
And my lonely heart's no longer for sale,
My champagne dreams turn to beer and ale
And I find that I'm—just a bust."

When I think that I've found my other half
And he tells me he loves me—
I guess for a laugh—
It's kinda tough to stand the gaff
And know that I'm—just a bust."

Begin all over? Be darned if I will,
If I can't have him, I'll just stand still.

This numbness is the guy to kill
What a feeling to be—just a bust."

HE HASN'T BEGUN YET.

Over at RKO Armistice Day, the whole studio was praying that the new boss, David Selznick, would cease firing.

LATEST GOSSIP.

That fellow driving the cream-colored roadster down the boulevard these days is Sam Hardy. He also has a cream-colored polo coat and cap. Mary Pickford's miniature golf course has joined the others. Saw a "No Trespassing" sign posted on it today.

Hollywood will have to wait two more weeks to satisfy its curiosity about Tallulah Bankhead. Her departure for the coast has been de-played... Jackie Cooper is always asking actresses their ages. He gets some fancy answers... First move of Dave Selznick was to stop production on Richard Dix's picture, "The Lost Squadron," and Lily Damita's "Chi Chi and Her Pappa." The latter probably will be abandoned... Frank Shellenback, one of the ranking pitchers in the Coast Baseball League, will play in Joe E. Brown's new picture.

HABIT PREVAILED.

They tell it that two assistant directors were combating the depression by working as dress-suit extras on Constance Bennett's set.

After Director E. H. Griffith was satisfied with rehearsals for the first scene, he called: "Now we'll take it. Everybody in their places."

Whereup on, to the amazement of their fellow extras, the two assistants piped up:

"Quiet, please."

IN THE NEWS.

Gangster pictures, sex-dramas, war epics come and go, but Westerns stay on forever.

George O'Brien, who turned out to be Tom Mix's successor at Fox, will shortly start work on "The Day Bandit," Tom Gill's story of the border that ran serially in the Cosmopolitan.

Directing George this time will be J. M. Kerrigan, the same you know as a character actor. Kerrigan is one of Hollywood's triple threat men. He is under a writing, directing, acting contract at Fox.

INCREASE OF $10,916 SHOWN IN FARMERS BANK X'MAS CHECKS

Total of $43,124 to Be Mailed
To 1206 People
Tomorrow

MOSTLY IN BRISTOL

Amount is Largest for This Club Since Holidays
of 1932

An increase of $10,916 is shown in the total amount of Christmas Club checks to be mailed this year to those holding cards in the club of the Farmers National Bank of Bucks County.

This increase brings the amount due club members this year up to $43,124, and the checks, 1206 in all, will be mailed tomorrow. The number of cards was likewise increased this year, being about 200 in excess of those for the 1933-34 club.

The Christmas Club of the Farmers Bank for 1934-35 is the largest in sum total since the club of 1931-32.

Of the 1206 cards issued during the past 12 months, there were 541 paid in full when the club ended.

One family is benefitting to the tune of $1700, and it can be said with truth that the Christmas season for that particular family group will be a merry one.

Annually are individuals and families realizing the value of saving for the Yuletide holidays through Christmas clubs, and all banks of the county report increased savings by this method.

The Farmers National Bank Christmas Club is the second largest in the county this year, it being second to the Merchants National Bank at Quakertown.

Some of the 1206 checks will go to nearby cities, Trenton and Philadelphia, but the majority will reach homes in the Bristol area. The checks are printed in green, and show an attractive Christmas scene with Santa Claus seated before a fire-place.

The new club of the Farmers Bank, which is already open, will have its first payment due on December 2nd. Payments range from 25 cents to $5 per week, thus making the checks now being made ready for distribution range from $12.50 to $250.

This particular club opened in 1924, the first checks being mailed just before the Christmas season of 1925.

Sudden Death Occurs For Mrs. Jackson Patterson

Mrs. Jackson Patterson, the former Mary Elmer, died at her Bath Road home this morning at four o'clock.

Taken suddenly ill while enroute home from Bristol last evening, Mrs. Patterson's condition gradually became worse, death occurring during the night.

Survivors include her husband; and one sister, Mrs. Margaret Welsh, Otter street. Born in Bristol, the deceased was the daughter of the late Peter and Margaret Elmer. She had resided on Bath Road since her marriage.

The late Mrs. Patterson was a communicant of St. Mark's R. C. Church.

Funeral will be held from the Patterson home, Monday at 9.30 a. m., with High Mass at St. Mark's Church at 10 o'clock. Burial in St. Mark's Churchyard will be under direction of the W. I. Murphy Estate, funeral directors.

1919—Truman H. Newberry and 133 others were indicted for fraud, corruption and conspiracy in connection with his victory over Henry Ford in senatorial race in Michigan.

1934—Duke of Kent married Princess Marina in London.

George M. Spicer Found Dead at Hulmeville Home

HULMEVILLE, Nov. 29—Funeral service will be held tomorrow afternoon for George M. Spicer, who was found dead at this residence, Main street, here, Wednesday noon.

The service at two o'clock will be conducted from the funeral home of Charles Haefner, with the Rev. James C. Gilbert, rector of Grace P. E. Church, officiating. Burial is to be made in Beechwood Cemetery, and friends may call this evening.

The late Mr. Spicer had not been well for a length of time. His condition became more critical on Wednesday, and arrangements were made for hospital care. When the Rev. Gilbert returned to the Spicer home shortly after noon, he found that death had occurred a short time previous. The illness was caused by a heart ailment.

The deceased, who was in his 73rd year, was the son of the late Isaac and Sarah Riley Spicer. One daughter, Mrs. Anna Streets, of Bear, Del., survives. Mr. Spicer, who was born in Philadelphia, was a painter by trade.

ROGERS HAD FAITH

Written for International News
Service by Jack Frye
(President of Transcontinental &
Western Air, Inc.)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 28—(INS)—Will Rogers had a tremendous faith in the safety of commercial aviation.

Today, Thanksgiving Day, the conclusion of a nationwide campaign for funds to perpetuate his memory in a lasting memorial, commercial aviation is making it plain what it is doing to justify that faith.

That the unfortunate and untimely death of this man should have occurred so far from the beaten trails of air transport, and while he was engaged in experimental and exploratory flight, makes little difference except as it discloses the difference between established air transport and flight over terrain which does not know the safeguards that exist today along the airways of the United States.

In the decade and more in which Will Rogers had used the air for travel, he had seen developed dozens and dozens of items, each designed to increase the factor of safety for the passenger in flight.

At the very moment of his recent death, the Bureau of Air Commerce was busy compiling figures which now disclose the remarkable extent to which safety in established air transport has been developed.

The airlines of the United States flew 40,714,686 passenger miles in the first half of this year for each passenger fatality! It was the greatest safety record in the history of commercial transport despite the fact that the same period saw the greatest number of passengers—319,484—carried on U. S. airlines.

Safety? The best aviation brains in the world are at work constantly improving this device, perfecting that device, that man's confidence in aviation may reach the peak attained by the visionary, farsighted Will Rogers.

To cite a few that avoid technical explanation:

Ice formations on wings used to be a hazard. As this is written, transport planes have already been equipped for the winter with de-icers that have solved that problem.

The third pilot—a remarkable gyroscopic device which does an almost human job of flying huge transport ships permitting the two human pilots to attend to flight details.

Cross-continent passenger ships, for example, are each equipped with three receivers and a transmitter, the latter being operative on four frequencies, enabling constant communication to be maintained with government and airport stations along the line of flight.

Weather prognostication—the Norwegian or air mass analysis system especially designed to give aviation correct forecasts.

Pre-flight plan—Pilots must know every minute detail of flight, what their altitudes will be, speed with relation to the ground and to the air, how much gasoline, how much reserve, alternate airways and airports, and a dozen technical factors too involved for explanation here.

Ground crew requirements are being increased daily. Flight dispatchers, for example, now have to be experienced pilots before they are permitted to take the important task of routing ships.

On the technical side, there are countless innovations that have been tried, tested and proved as added safety factors.

Aviation engineers, unceasing in their efforts, push on toward greater safety. Their efforts and those of all commercial aviation could be dedicated to no greater friend of flying than Will Rogers.

MRS. ARTHUR LEAFE IS TO BE BURIED IN VIRGINIA

Former Bristol Resident Dies
at Her Home in Dallas,
Texas

VISITED HERE THIS YEAR

Mrs. Arthur Leafe, former well-known resident of Bristol, who died at her home in Dallas, Texas, Monday, will be buried this afternoon at Winchester, Virginia.

While a resident of Bristol Mrs. Leafe was active in Bristol M. E. Church, and a soloist in the church choir. She was also a charter member of Bristol Branch of the W. C. T. U. About two months ago she came North to attend the convention of the W. C. T. U. held in Atlantic City, N. J., as a representative of the state of Texas, and took advantage of the opportunity to visit old friends in Bristol.

When Mrs. Leafe went to Winchester, Va., many years ago, feeling against the North was still intense, but nevertheless she and her cousins, the Misses Sarah B. and Hamie Repsher, took the duty upon themselves and each Decoration Day placed flowers upon the graves of the Northern dead, which are buried in the National Cemetery.

Mrs. Leafe's sudden death will be much regretted by her friends.

Langhorne B. & L. Pays Out $102,600 to Shareholders

The Langhorne Building and Loan Association will this month pay $102,600 in cash to shareholders, this sum representing the matured 29th series of stock.

The amount being returned to shareholders from dues paid and profits earned, matches the amount paid by five banks in south central Bucks County to Christmas Club members. The profits to the Building and Loan stockholders 6 5-8% per annum, brought their sum of $73,359 paid in dues up to the $102,600. Thus the earnings are shown to be $29,241 for this series.

In addition there has been paid during the past year to the Association patrons $26,000 in dues from the 28th Series plus $11,400 in profits, or a total of $38,000. This makes the grand total paid in cash in 1935, $140,600.

RIP GOAL POSTS APART

(By Jack Orr)

MORRISVILLE, Nov. 29—Bristol High's juggernaut rolled over the Morrisville Bulldogs in their traditional clash, here, yesterday. Coach "Bill" Dougherty's charges crushed the home lads by the count of 20-0, to keep their streak of victories intact over the Bulldogs.

After being held for one period and the major portion of the second, the Bunnies struck when an intercepted pass brought the initial touchdown of the fray. The visiting lads added another pair of tallies in the third quarter, running one over, and striking through the air for the third.

This was the final game of the year for both clubs. The Bristolians wound up their campaign with seven triumphs, two defeats and one tie. Morrisville High has for its year's record five victories, a pair of losses and one deadlock. The Blue and Gold, however, has not been playing the calibre of opposition which the Bunnies have encountered this year.

Getting back to yesterday's fray, Bristol showed form and really reached the peak of their year's performance. Prior to this game the lads had failed to click consistently, but yesterday Dougherty-coached boys worked in coordination which was wonderful to watch.

Morrisville received all the breaks possible in the opening period, but still could not cross the Bristol goal line. Captain Craig White's opening kick-off traveled to the ten-yard line where Harry Bauroth in an attempt to give Ray Phillips a reverse was downed. After a loss of six yards the visitors were forced to kick out of danger.

Conti's boot traveled to the Bristol 26-yard line. Here White tore off a first down on the Bristol 15. A penalty and another plunge by White brought the apple to the Bristol four-yard line and another first down.

This scoring threat was broken up soon when "Bill" Mignoni broke through and tossed the great White for a six yard loss. A pair of incomplete passes into the end zone gave the Cardinal and Gray the ball on their own twenty.

Tearing off two first downs in a row, Bristol brought the apple to midfield. They were forced to punt at this point and Conti's boot went deep into Morrisville's territory, being returned by Byrne to his own 30. White on a quick kick returned the ball to the Bristol 32, where the period ended, scoreless.

After an exchange of kicks a Bristol back fumbled and Ed. Schwind recovered for Morrisville on the Bristol 30. White made three at tackle. An incomplete pass followed by another lost the ball for the boys of John Hoffman.

Here Sagolla kicked to the Morrisville 45 where a fumble occurred and Al. Proffy recovered for Bristol. The Cardinal and Gray soon lost the ball and another scoring chance went up in the air.

Another exchange and Joe Pidcock returned a Sag-boot to the Bristol 28-yard line. Another real scoring threat was in progress. White made three, followed by Pidcock's four-yard plunge. White then made it a first down on the Bristol 14.

The next play sent the Bristol fans storming into the field. White faded back to throw a pass. It was a bad one, and Al. Proffy intercepted it and raced 79 yards for a touchdown. Not a hand was placed upon the Bristol guard on his spectacular run. It was Al's second touchdown of the year.

Sagolla tossed a pass to Lou Tomlinson for the conversion. A minute later the half ended. Bristol, 7; Morrisville, 0.

Coming back fast in the third period, the Bristol Bunnies counted twice in the third period.

Holiday Wedding Takes Place At Church in Holmesburg

A wedding took place in St. Dominick's Catholic Church, 8500 Frankford avenue, Holmesburg, Thanksgiving morning, when Miss Rose DePalma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael DePalma, 4206 Welsh road, Holmesburg, became the bride of Louis J. Embiscuso, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Embiscuso, Lafayette street. The ceremony was performed at ten o'clock by the Rev. Father Meely. Many relatives and friends of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony.

The former Miss DePalma was attended by Miss Sara Walsh, 2573 Huntingdon street, as maid of honor; Miss Mary Descenzo, 7247 Hagerman street, and Miss Theresa DePalma, sister of the bride, 4206 Welsh road, as bridesmaids. The groomsmen were Nicholas Madrigale, Holmesburg; and Angelo Di Renzo, Bristol. Miss Louise Checchio, the soloist, was accompanied by Miss Lister, organist of the church, who also played Lohengrin's Wedding March as the bridal party entered the church.

The bride wore a gown of white satin, fashioned on form-fitting lines, the bias cut skirt ending in a train. The long full sleeves had tight-fitting cuffs. The shirred bodice was trimmed with pearls and beads, and the neckline was high with a standing collar. Her veil of tulle and lace was arranged with a pearl trimmed lace cap and face veil. She wore white satin slippers and carried a spray of white roses.

The maid of honor was attired in a gown of Nile green satin, made on close-fitting lines, the skirt ending in a slight train. The sleeves were long, tight-fitting and button trimmed. The neckline was cowl shape, and a spray of flowers of self material was worn on the left shoulder. Her satin had edged with maline, and satin slippers were the tone of her gown, and she carried a bouquet of ten roses. The bridesmaids were garbed similarly to the maid of honor, the shade of the gowns being peach and material of satin. Their accessories were of matching tone, and they carried bouquets of roses.

A reception occurred at the residence of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Embiscuso left for a honeymoon trip to New York. Mrs. Embiscuso travelled in a black and white dress and wore black accessories.

The couple will reside at the home of the bride's parents.

DINNER GUESTS

Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Winder, Jr., Durham Road, entertained on Thanksgiving Day at dinner: Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Winder and children, Stephen, Lorraine, Catherine and Eva, Miss Lorraine Winder, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Winder and daughter Doris, Harold Winder, Mrs. Emma Lovett, Durham Road; and Alvin Simmers, Doolinton.

35 NEW FAMILIES ARE ADDED TO RELIEF ROLLS

159 Families Who Had Previously Received Relief Put Back On Lists

TOTAL FAMILIES, 3109

During the week ending November 23rd, 579 families in Montgomery and Bucks counties were dropped from direct relief because they had been referred to WPA jobs and had received their first pay.

In addition to this number, relief was discontinued to 109 other families because they had received work in private industry.

To offset these families, however, 35 families who never had relief before had to be given it during the week, and 159 families who had relief at one time, but not recently, had to be added to the rolls again. This made a net decrease of 494 families.

On November 23rd, there were 3109 families getting relief. The total number of families that had relief discontinued because they had gotten WPA jobs to date is 1350.

The new plan of payment to WPA workers inaugurated this week, makes it possible for direct relief to be discontinued not later than 21 days after the man goes to work on the WPA job. Because of this, it is expected that the relief rolls will diminish very rapidly during the next few weeks.

There will be, however, an additional number who will have to apply for relief because they have lost their jobs in private industry. Such persons will not be eligible for work on the WPA jobs, as no person coming to the Emergency Relief since November 1st, is eligible to receive such a job unless he had been getting relief between May and November, 1935.

ALL RECOGNIZE UTTER DEPENDENCE UPON GOD, EVEN THOUGH THANKSGIVING MEANS LITTLE MORE THAN FEASTS AND FOOTBALL TO SOME, SAYS PASTOR

Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton is Speaker at Union Thanksgiving
Service in First Baptist Church — Tells of Privations of Those Who First Established the Day

Protestant churches of Bristol conducted a union Thanksgiving service in the First Baptist Church yesterday morning, the speaker being the Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, pastor of Bristol Presbyterian Church.

The sermon as delivered by the Rev. Knowlton follows:

Timothy 6:17 "... God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy."

Carlyle has somewhere said that every man should put himself at zero, and then reckon every degree ascend from that point as an occasion for thanks. Precisely of that scale does the Bible compute our mercies, and the theology of all the churches, following the true experience revealed in and through the Word, find nothing in man that can merit the gifts that are his save that which comes to man through grace. That is to say, at the root of all man's conquests, both in the material and in the spiritual realms, is some revelation of God's love; and the cause of all man's defeats is the forgetting and neglect of that love. It was in that belief that Lincoln first established a day of national thanksgiving, and it is in that belief that that day has been continued. And even though the day has come to mean little more than a day of feasts and football to a vast number of people, yet even they,—while they do not assemble together in their various places of worship, for many of them have no place of worship,—even they recognize on this day their utter dependence upon God for all that they have and all that they are.

"I see his hand in the path of life,
His law to doom or save;
His love divine in the hopes that shine
Beyond the sinner's grave.
His care that sendeth sun and rain,
His wisdom giving rest;
His price of sin that we may win
The heaven of the blest."

It is only natural that as we count our blessings, the most obvious should take first place in our minds. These are the material blessings, the things that God hath given us richly to enjoy. So it is natural that Thanksgiving be a feast day rather than a fast day. But without that fast, it is impossible for us to enjoy richly the feast. So it was at Plymouth on that first American Thanksgiving, when, after a Winter of suffering and privation, and a Summer of intense labor, the first feast was held.

For those who today are rebelling against their comparative state of poverty, who are envious of those who have more of this world's goods, who themselves once lived on a higher material scale, these material blessings loom large by their absence. Yet how much better is their lot in the material world than was the lot of their fathers. The descendants of the Pilgrims who, we are told, were so poor that they did not have money with which to buy extra sole leather for their shoes and could offer no security for their passage except a promise of seven years of labor in the forests of America for the merchantmen who furnished them their ship, are now, many of them, demanding that the government support them. The sons of those who hewed out from the wilderness the first log shacks and spent that first Winter about a leaky smoking fireplace, now complain if they lack central oil heat for their celled houses.

Do not misunderstand me, I do not wish to imply that the comforts of life which modern science and industry have developed should not be made available for all who desire them and can use them to the greater advantage of their health and happiness, or that the conquest of the material world has not brought with it distinct advantages and a greater opportunity for spiritual as well as material well-being. I do not yearn for a return to the so-called "good old days" before the auto supplanted the buggy as a vehicle for Sunday morning peregrinations and Major Bowes competed with the evening service for the favor of the crowd. I do not feel that the church has degenerated or is held in less reverence than in the past; but I do feel that the average church member is far more critical and far better educated, and that the church does not always meet the greater demands that is put upon it for an adequate and intelligent Christian faith.

And yet there is little doubt but that the tendency of our day has put far too much stress on material prosperity as the highest standard of well-being. We have thought of the kingdom of God as if it were a product of mills and factories and could be accomplished when every family had two cars and a radio. Happiness has been gauged by the size of the bank balance and the number of car loadings. Our economic depression has been all the more profound because it came as the end of a dream, a dream in which civilization confused God and mammon, and had their hope set on the uncertainty of riches.

Thankful as we are today for all the material blessings that are still ours, for the things that God has given us richly to enjoy, we must face the fact that our happiness must spring from deeper roots than those of the soil from which all material things come, that real happiness is the possession of the heart and soul and character, that it is an achievement of the personality. There is a real sense in which the possession of things makes such happiness harder to achieve than in the past. For things do make great demands upon us, and he who makes it his aim to acquire wealth must pass by many things that are far more worthy and important. That is why the Master stressed the fact that it was not riches but the love of riches that is the root of all evil.

As we compare the Plymouth of today, with its modern improvements and its poverty, with its wealth and its slums, its churches and its saloons, with that earlier Plymouth where the first Thanksgiving feast was held, we cannot escape the conviction that since their day we have made but little progress in the conquest of happiness. Our material progress has far outstripped our spiritual progress. Our possessions have not brought happiness nor have our sky-scrapers lifted us nearer God. The Pilgrims had the essentials of happiness and character and worth in their own personalities and in their religion, just as we have, and because they were not anxious about many things, they often cultivated them to far better effect.

"Man was made for happiness, and anyone who is completely happy has a right to say to himself, 'I am doing God's will on earth.' All the righteous, all the saints, all the martyrs were happy." So speaks the head of the monastery in Dostoyevsky's "Brothers Karamazov." "Yes," answered the rich woman to whom he was speaking, "Yes, and yet—Happiness—Happiness—where is it? Who can say that he is happy?"

There are many like that rich woman today who are asking the same question, many who have not discovered the place to look for happiness, many who have sought it in external things, and who, because they have discovered the deceitfulness of riches, consider themselves and all of life a failure. They can feel no sense of thanksgiving, for they feel no sense of joy, and where there is no happiness, there can be little praise. Nor can they discover happiness until they look within themselves and discover their own inner resources, the higher gifts of God of love and courage and contentment, until they find something more worthwhile to which to dedicate their lives. The qualities that make for real thanksgiving are outlined in that series of "blesseds" which are the Beatitudes. "Happy are the poor in spirit. Happy are the meek. Happy are they that mourn." (What a paradox is there!) "Happy are the merciful, the pure in heart, the peace-makers. Happy are they that are persecuted for righteousness' sake. Happy are ye when men shall persecute you for my sake. Rejoice and be exceedingly glad." All these, you see, are the expressions of inner qualities of the soul, the virtues that sum up to

Miss Florence McIlhany Is Wed To Robert Brooks

At a wedding ceremony performed in Bristol M. E. Church, last evening at six o'clock, Miss Florence McIlhany, Swain street, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank McIlhany, became the bride of Robert D. Brooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Brooks, 204 Jefferson avenue. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Norman L. Davidson, pastor of the church.

The couple was attended by Miss Theresa L. Juliet, of Belleville, N. J.; and Harold W. Hughes, Hamilton Square, N. J., a cousin of the groom. Only members of the immediate families of the contracting parties attended the nuptial ceremony.

The former Miss McIlhany was attired in dark brown chiffon velvet, brown velvet hat, with accessories to match; and wore a corsage of tallis-man roses. Her attendant, Miss Juliet, wore a dress of pumpkin-toned satin-back crepe, green hat, and brown accessories. Her corsage was of white roses.

THE ENGINEERS' SERVICES

If any doubt remains that a study of our traffic problems by engineering experts would help in their solution, it should be instantly removed by an incident which occurred in Newton, Massachusetts.

A careful study was made at one of the worst accident corners in that city. The recommendation which followed was so simple that it at first sounded absurd—that the amber light be permitted to burn one second longer before it changed. The recommendation was adopted, however, and to the surprise of everyone but the experts the accident records at that corner immediately showed a decided drop.

There are large, obvious causes of accidents, and there are small, inobvious ones. Those of the former class are pretty well known, and conscientious, if not always effective, measures are being taken for their removal. Those of the latter class, doubtless many in number, continue to take their deadly toll because no one even suspects their existence.

The majority of these minor factors can probably be remedied as easily as the one at Newton, where the burning time of an amber light was extended by a single second. But they can not be remedied until they are detected. And they can be detected only by the close, accurate observation of engineering experts.

OUR NOISIEST CITY

A noisemeter is a device which records the degree of noise in the vicinity in which it operates. It is used to register studio applause or lack of same, for amateur piano-accordionists and frightened sopranos on the radio. It has been employed of late to record progress in anti-noise campaigns, notably in London, Rome and New York.

The unit of noise, for the purpose of the record, is the decibel, and a decibel is the same in New York as it is in Rome. Thus it is possible to say which is the noisiest city—or at least the noisiest of those so far subjected to the test.

The loudest of them all is London, where such survivals as cobbled pavements, steam lorries and narrow streets, which give resonance to sound, all contribute to the decibel total.

You would probably never guess which is the noisiest of American communities.

According to the noisemeter it is Washington, whose rating is a 77 average—much higher than New York's. The quietest sector of the city is Rock Creek Park, the noisiest, the intersection of Eighteenth street and Columbia road. Washington ancient cars doubtless figure in its sorry showing. On the other hand, the readings were taken while congress was not in session. With the lawmakers in full cry, the capital should compare unfavorably with Bedlam.

When we begin to receive the bill for the WPA, it probably will remind us that the pork which comes from pigs is not the only kind that's high.

Fortunately, it is not possible to buy yourself a modern war on an easy-credit plan.

Once upon a time, a jobless man declined an offer of five dollars to be a gong-getter at an amateur hour.

35-POUND "CATCH"

COLOGNE—(INS)—A fisherman's strange "catch" of coins worth about $200 led to the arrest here of eight men. A man was fishing in the Rhine when he had a very firm bite. On reeling in he saw he had "caught" a heavy brown paper parcel. He opened it and found 85 mark pieces. He handed these over at once to the police who discovered that they were counterfeit coins. As a result a gang of five has been arrested on forgery charges together with three alleged utterers of the counterfeit coins.

BOY SCOUTS IMMIGRANTS

BRISBANE, Queensland—(INS)—Arrangements are being made to send 10 Boy Scouts to Queensland every month from Great Britain. This announcement was made by the Settlers' League, in London that negotiations are still in progress with Federal Government for financial assistance, under the settlers' agreement, for the boys' passage to Queensland. On arrival, the boys will be given occupations, chiefly in farming.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Renk, Monmouth Junction, N. J., were entertained Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Renk, Cedar street.

FAT GIRLS GET THE GO-BY—SLIM GIRLS WIN MEN

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.
There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right. All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace. Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out this way. Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same scientific method used by doctors. So why not lose fat the easy way—without starvation diets or back-breaking, bending and rolling exercises? Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get Marmola today from druggists. Advertisement.

"WIFE IN CUSTODY" by BEATRICE LUBITZ

CHAPTER XIII

Spring was late that year, but when it finally came it brought in its wake sunny days whose delicate and lifting breeze brought loveliness even to mid-Manhattan afternoons. The park, from the first faint green, slowly, richly budded and blossomed into fulfillment; the tulips in the flower beds in front of the Plaza were a riot of color. The air was clean as if magically washed of soot and smoke by the winter's rain and snow and the tall towers on West Fifty-ninth Street gleamed against a cobalt-blue sky. Fifth Avenue was gay with color, the sunshine warm and balmy and the breeze tipped with minty freshness.

But as the days grew warmer exhilaration turned to languor in Helen's veins. A lassitude crept over her that carried with it the poison of renewed doubts and uncertainty.

Outwardly she was calm enough over her work, but inside her heart was a cauldron of conflicting emotions and thoughts. She was alternately gay, despondent, and exhilarated but never hopeful, never peaceful. Love that was reputed to fill the heart with joy and ecstasy had turned sour in her breast. She couldn't stand the pain, the misery, the uncertainty any longer. Finally she came to a decision and with it acquired, if not peace, a sort of calm.

She was going to have it out with Walter that night. She wanted to look very beautiful. She dawdled until the others left and then dashed into the cheerless lavatory. A touch of Anastasia's Au Naturel Rouge, applied surreptitiously although no one was looking—and hastily removed with Anastasia Rose Petal Cleansing Cream.

"No," she decided. "I don't want to look different. I'll be just as usual."

They met at the library, now crowded with frankly meeting lovers. The dear familiar gray car. The relief as she sank into her seat and the car sped away. Walter . . . He parked on a dark side street to kiss her long and hungrily. He was in a joyous mood tonight. "I know a swell little restaurant," he announced.

The swift ride down Fifth Avenue now deserted. He told her bits of gossip, that bobbed hair was in to stay, he was certain. He was getting three Frenchmen into the shops to cut hair exclusively—an innovation, face lifting . . . The possibilities of face lifting in the salons.

She debated the advisability of it . . . She told him about what she had eaten at lunch and which, she felt, had made her ill.

She loved the restaurant he took her to. It was a neat brownstone house on a side street, and the diners sat in a semi-open-air garden. Garlands of artificial flowers decked the walls and in the center a fountain splashed over plump and languid goldfish.

The dinner was excellent and Walter was in high spirits. Slowly Helen's depression melted into thin air. Her resolve to have it out with him waned. She couldn't give him up! She drank the sour wine that came with the dinner, and felt very cosmopolitan. No, she couldn't give him up. After all, even this much of Walter was so much better than nothing. What if he didn't marry her?—he loved her. She loved him. They had so much more than most people. Was marriage really everything? The future? Why worry about the future? "In the future," Helen decided cheerfully, as she tried to imitate Walter's dexterous handling of the spaghetti, "we may all be dead!"

Walter faced the door. Suddenly Helen saw him choke over his wine and grow deathly pale. Helen instinctively turned around to see what had happened. A tall, beautifully groomed woman came down the steps into the garden. It was, however, not Irene. She turned to see Walter breathe a sigh of relief—so the color seep back into his face. But Helen's mood had instantly changed. Something clicked in her mind. Her resolve had come back.

Walter, she said suddenly, "I've got to talk to you."

"Well, I wonder what you call what you've been doing all evening!"

"This is different Walter, we've got to stop." "Stop?" "We've got to stop seeing each other. It's no use. I've never had such happy times, it's true. But I'm not happy. Not any more. Neither are you. We're getting in deeper and deeper and we're going round and round in circles."

"I could marry you," Walter suggested hollowly.

"No, you won't, Walter. I'm not kidding yourself any longer. You'll make the gesture but you can't go through with it. Something's holding you back. Oh, I don't know, I'm so miserable, I don't

She could barely wait for the two weeks to pass.

She got back to New York on a Saturday and on Sunday evening Walter met her at the entrance to Prospect Park in his car.

"It's no use, Walter," she melted into his arms. "I'm yours. We'll have to wait, Walter."

"No, damn it, we won't wait. I love you and want you for my wife! By the way, did I ever ask you to marry me?"

"As a matter of fact, you didn't." She laughed ruefully.

"All right. I'm asking you now. Will you marry me?" he demanded sternly.

There were thrilling moments when she was like wax in his hands. . . .

want you to do something that will make you miserable. Listen," she mused on swiftly, as he was about to interrupt her, "I've been thinking it all over. You'll say you'll marry me tomorrow and tomorrow you'll tell me to wait. Oh, Walter, I'm not blaming you. But I can't stand it any longer."

Her voice dropped to a whisper. "Friday I start my vacation. I'm going away with one of my friends. I'm not even going to tell you where. I'm going away for two weeks and try to forget you. You try to forget me. Let's see if we really are in love. See if you can get over me. I'll do my very best to get over you. Then, if we can, her face twitched, "that suits me. And if not . . ."

"I'll marry you, damn it," he said between set teeth.

She laughed mirthlessly. "We'll wait . . ."

"Helen, don't," he begged. "Don't be bitter. I'll marry you tomorrow."

"She put her hand over her mouth. She did her best to keep the tears from rising to her eyes. "No, I'm going away. I'll be back. It's the only thing we can do."

Sunday morning Helen and Mary Krebs, whom Helen knew from high school, took the Hudson River Dayboat to Kingston Point. She hadn't said good-bye to Walter. The boat was packed with a rowdy crowd of picnickers. Helen tried to be gay, tried to fall into Mary's holiday mood, but the sight of the promiscuous love-making about her—some of the couples barely waited for the boat to start before they began; the smell of untidy lunches turned her stomach.

Helen conscientiously set about to enjoy the wooded hills, the wide stony brook with its natural swimming hole. But she kept seeing Walter, and in comparison with Walter the young art students, whose Summer school was nearby, seemed a callow, unsalted lot.

"I should be delighted," she murmured.

But there was no fun in his voice now. "We'll be married tomorrow and I mean it. I missed you like the very devil. We'll go to City Hall tomorrow and get it over with."

"Oh, no, Walter, I'm afraid. Oh, I know I'm a fool, but when I think of Stella and Irene—I just get icy cold. I'm afraid. Let's wait till Irene is married a little longer. Maybe she'll be . . . kinder after she's married a while. I'm here, darling. I'll never be far from you. I'll never go away from you again. But I'm panicky. I want to be your wife more than anything in the world, but I'm too nervous yet. I must get used to the idea now. I must have time to think definitely about it. You understand, don't you, Walter?"

"All right. Let's set a date. How about July fourth?"

"Swell. We'll be married on Independence Day."

"I wonder if there's any special significance in that."

"Oh, Walter, what an unpoetical thought. Just for that we'll make it July fifth."

"No, it's bad luck to postpone a wedding date. Make it sooner, but never postpone it. We'll keep it the fourth."

"All right. July fourth and then I shall be Mrs. Walter Riley. Oh, Walter, I can't believe it. Hold me, love me . . . I'm afraid . . ."

The park was heavy with fog—so foggy that Walter had to peer out of the side to find their little road where they could park without danger of intrusion. It was hot and damp. The round park lights were ghastly. In the deep recess of the coupe, it was warm and airless like the inside of a box.

She was like wax in his hands as they gave themselves up to frenzied love-making that was both a delight and a torture.

We Should Be Thankful

this Thanksgiving for the many blessings that have come to us in the year which is fast coming to an end.

As individuals and as a nation we have passed through times of great sorrow and distress. Our people have been deprived of many necessities; they have lost those comforts they once enjoyed; they have suffered from idleness—for of work there was none.

But conditions are changing. The idle are being taken back into industry. The hungry are being fed. The homeless are having shelter.

Those who were so unfortunate as to lose their life insurance protection are now better able financially to insure their lives.

A better day is dawning, and so on this Thanksgiving Day let us give thanks.

All Recognize Utter Dependence Upon God

righteousness, and all these, you well know, are the vital realities that do make life worth living and make the heart thankful.

The spring from which such blessings flow, the spring from whence flows the waters of life, is God. "He who giveth us richly all things to enjoy" gives also the qualities of life by which we enjoy them. To that Source in love and thankfulness we return our thanks for the blessings which are ours. It is to Him we attribute the blessings of any character and any love which we possess. For all things, material and spiritual, are His gift.

If there be those here who even yet can find little reason for thanksgiving, who feel that life is futile, who cannot "praise God from whom all blessings flow," I would remind you of how Father Absolute comforted David Quest, telling him the story of the opening of his church bazaar in the slums of London. "David," he said, "when that girl, the Duchess of Manchester, opened our bazaar last week, do you know what were her last words to me. Just as the Duchess said good-bye, Sally Bates rushed past me, gave a squeal and hurled herself into the arms of that hopeless husband of hers. He had just been released from gaol. And he flung his arms around Sally and hugged her fit to kill. The Duchess watched them. I said to her, 'That's Sally Bates meeting her bloke, he's just out of quod.' Do you know what she said? You know what an unhappy story her married life has been. She said, 'My God, how I envy her!' And turned with no other word and went off in her Rolls car to her Gosvenor Square palace, two chauffeurs on the box, coronet on the door, handkerchief to her eyes. Poverty! It is only poverty of love that matters!"

The tragedy of those who have no thankfulness in their hearts is not a financial tragedy. It is the tragedy of spiritual blindness, of lovelessness. "To those who have tried and seemingly have failed, Reach out, dear Lord, and comfort them today; For those whose hope has dimmed, whose faith has faded, Lift up some lighted, heavenly torch, I pray. They are so frightened, Lord; reach out a hand. They are so hurt and helpless; be their friend. Baffled and blind, they do not understand— They think this dark and tangled road the end.

Oh, touch to flame their hope that has burned low, And strike with fire faith's ashes that are dead. Let them walk proudly once again, and go Seeking the sure and steadfast light ahead. Help them to move among their fellow men With courage to live, courage to try again."

YOUNG MOYER, OF CROYDON, IN GAS-HOUSE BRAWL, KNOCKS OUT EDDIE MARGERUM, OF BRISTOL, IN SENSATIONAL MANNER AT CROYDON ARENA

CROYDON, Nov. 29.—In a real old-fashioned gas house brawl Young Moyer, of Croydon, knocked out Eddie Margerum, of Bristol, in a most sensational manner in the second round of their bout for the benefit of the Croydon Fire Company Wednesday night at the arena here.

Margerum, may it be said, showed plenty of fight, slashing away every moment that he was on his feet. But Moyer, a cool determined youngster, just stepped inside, stabbed the Bristol entry with a heavy right to the head or body then would step away and repeat. Margerum was knocked down six times in the first and twice in the second before Moyer landed a hard smash to the jaw, finishing his opponent for the night. The Bristol lad was knocked out so completely that it took several minutes to revive him.

Another bout that had the fans in an uproar was the clash between Fred Daniels, Burlington, and Charles Irwin, Croydon. Both boys came into the ring at 167 pounds. At the opening bell the Croydon entry rushed across the ring in a wild fury crashing the Burlington boy into a neutral corner before the Jersey lad had a chance to get set. Daniels coming out of the flurry in a daze, but Irwin's advantage was short lived. Daniels quickly got his bearings and proceeded to give the Croydon man a terrific beating, knocking him down three times for the count of nine before finally knocking him out near the end of the first round.

In the wind-up Nick Indelicato, Bristol, defeated Ed Martin, of Burlington, in a slow uninteresting limit fight. The Burlington man persisted in holding at every opportunity and missed many chances as Indelicato was far from being in perfect condition.

In the Opener Mike McCann, Trenton, lost to Buck Cramer, of Burlington, in a wild swinging affair, while Eddie Downs, of Bristol, was knocked out by George Shull, of Burlington, in the third round of a fast fight. Downs was knocked down for a count of five in the first by a heavy right smash over the heart, by the speedy Shull which slowed the local boy up and readied him up for the inevitable knock-out.

Alfred Mancuso, the bouncing baker boy of Garden street, gave the crowd plenty of laughs in his fight with Gene Backus, another Burlington boy. Mancuso would swing and duck so low that he spent most of his time on the floor on his knees. So funny was his tactics that Backus stopped several times in the middle of the ring and laughed at his opponent. Backus got the decision for what little punching was done in the three rounds.

Mike Sutton, Croydon, 132 pounds, defeated William Gusrang, of Burlington, in a heavy swinging set to which went the limit, and Abe Heistman also of Burlington defeated Carl Brennan, of Trenton, in a light hitting affair in three rounds.

Kip Schistler, 130 pounds, of Burlington, lost to Don Pizzio, of Jersey City, in three hard-smashing rounds. The Jersey City boy floored Schistler in the first round with a hard smash to the jaw, but the Burlington boy came back strong to lose a very unpopular decision.

Walloping Willie Pendergast, of Croydon, must have left his wallow home before coming to the arena because Sam Rocupant, a husky Burlingtonian, smacked him all over the ring, giving him a boxing lesson he won't forget in a long time. It was fortunate for the Croydon lad that Rocupant's blows lacked power to deliver a knock-out before the end of the bout.

The officials for the evening were Referee, Eddie Moffo; judges, Robert Porter and Thomas Jago; timekeeper, William Seibold; announcer, Francis Corrigan.

Sunday's game between the Recs and St. Ann's has been called off after a tussle over rules to use. The Big Green are using professional rules while the Saints are under the collegiate ruling. It was decided to call off the fray as no agreement could be made.

This Sunday the Big Green will meet Triple X of Frankford in what promises to be an interesting game. The new football signed by every one of the Rec players will be awarded at this contest.

Recital Enjoyed by Group At the Martini Studio

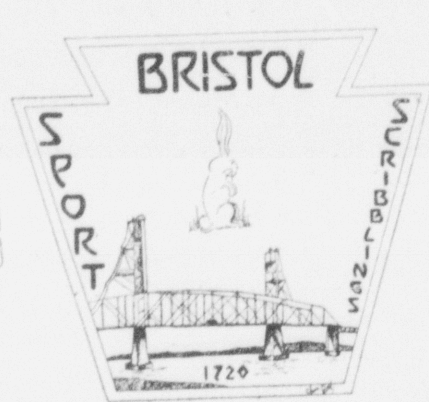

The second of a series of recitals was given last evening at the Martini Studio, 210 Mill street, before an enthusiastic audience.

Moritz Emery, Philadelphia, and two of his pupils, Earl Townsend and Thomas Hopely, assisted Mr. Martini in a most ambitious program.

The playing of the Grieg Sonata in F for piano and violin by Mr. Emery and Mr. Martini, respectively, was something long to be remembered. The ensemble was well high perfect, and their interpretation of this Scandinavian music gave the needed cheer, following, as it did, the Beethoven Sonata Pathétique, for piano solo, played by Earl Townsend. This young man has great talent and moreover great love for the masters and their music, which makes his playing most enjoyable. Later on the program he played pieces by Sibelius, Listz, Emery, Chopin, etc.

Thomas Hopely, who has already been heard here, sang with still more beautiful tone and shading, and his songs were a delightful contrast to the instrumental numbers.

Mr. Martini selected to play three modest numbers by masters of the 17th century by way of educational culture and beauty. These musical evenings are to be continued throughout the season and are one of the highly instructive events of the artistic life in Bristol.

Make way for the biggest independent football game in this vicinity. It will be played Sunday with the Purple and Gold of St. Ann's combating a strong Bristol Recreation Center eleven. It is reported that the Saints' club, undecided whether or not to meet the heavier Harriman team, put it up to the players themselves. The gridders voted a hearty consent and the Recs-Saints game is on.

What a club "Dynamite Joe" Diamanti has down at Andalusia! We dropped down on that eleven on Sunday, and found they have quite a ball team. They average, probably, around 165. Green uniforms, from tip to toe, green goal posts, green water buckets and a green scoreboard all do their part to add to the color arrangement of the Big Green. This club is undefeated and have scored 115 points to their opponents' eight. They are the best uniformed team this observer has seen in independent ranks.

We hear that the reason the fights were called off on Monday night was that a dispute arose whether or not to use professional referees. The State Boxing Commission was in favor of the pros while the A. A. U. wanted amateur officials. They were wrangling about this matter and the fights were called off.

According to reports from Lambertville on Sunday, the officials were not dressed in white, as is the custom, but wore the Red shirts of the home club. The Saints lost a tough one too, as they were penalized 55 yards in the opening few minutes of the game.

This observer was wondering who would be calling them when the two independent clubs meet here Sunday. We hope there are non-partisan officials in the game on the Sabbath. Our recommendation goes to the only official in town who holds working cards in the Central Board of Officials and in the P. I. A. A. If this individual happened to be asked he probably would find a pair of good men to work the game quite reasonable. It's worth a try anyway.

We saw our first basketball game for this year in the Bristol League the other night and our choice for first position in the circuit goes to Nev McGinley's scorching Moose aggregation. With such stars as Roe, Green, Lawrence, Dugan, Gize Dougherty and David they look like the class in the circuit.

It looks to us as if the Y. M. A. were pretty lucky to pull their game with the Hibs out of the fire in the last few minutes. That was a nice shot which Dorsey made but the Y's were outplayed all the way.

Famous comebacks: Villanova.

Our selections took a swing on the upward trend last week as we picked four out of six. Villanova and Princeton were the teams who did us dirt and kept us out of the select 1,000% class. In twenty games we have picked ten winners, lost seven and tied three. Just about breaking the midway mark.

ART SOLD AS LUMBER

STOCKHOLM—(INS)—A picture claimed to be a genuine Gainsborough bearing the artist's signature was found among lumber acquired by a dealer in Halmstad, South Sweden. The canvas, is about 20 by 17 inches and shows a landscape with several typical Gainsborough figures. A customer saw the picture and thinking it was a Gainsborough suggested that it should be seen by experts. It may be worth thousands.

started a real march into Touchdownland. Wilson holding the ball on his own 10-yard line, started to run, but dropped the ball where Bill Mignoni recovered for the Dougherty-coached lads on the Morrisville 10.

Jupes Zefferi scampered the necessary ten yards for the touchdown with ease. With careful precision Joe Conti added the extra point by his place kick.

A few minutes later the final tally of the game was scored. Bristol's kick was fumbled by Joe Pidcock and was recovered by Phil Carnvale on the opposition's 22-yard line. On the first play Harry Baurth carefully tossed a 30-yard pass into the end zone.

There Johnnie Messinelli leaped for the pill and with the most spectacular grab of the year, Johnnie really left his feet to get the ball. Conti's place kick was wide of its mark. Bristol, 20; Morrisville, 0.

Every one of the Bristol touchdowns rightly enough was scored by a senior. Al Profy, Jupes Zefferi and John Messinelli all were playing their last game for the Cardinal and Gray. Dom Sagolla also was playing his "swan song" in a Bunny uniform, and he also covered his position well.

Coach "Bill" Dougherty, after the game, stated that this year's club was the best team he had ever coached. The club this year, although having, not as high an average as last year, was playing stronger opposition and they covered themselves with glory while they were playing .800% football.

By virtue of this triumph the lads of the Cardinal and Gray won the Lower Bucks County Scholastic Conference title and will be awarded a silver trophy.

The Bristol High rooters started a new tradition as they rose in a body and tore the homesters' goalposts apart. The rapid work of the lads who were rooting for the Bristolians had the structures down in less time than it takes to tell.

Each person was awarded with a piece of the valued ruins and many hearts in Bristol are happy today for they have a piece of the goal posts in which the Bristol lads turned back the Blue and Gold for the eighth consecutive season, this year, by the count of 20-0.

THREE CAGE TILTS ARE BOOKED FOR TONIGHT

Three undefeated teams of the Bristol Amateur Basketball League will be in action tonight as the circuit gets under way again on the Mutual Aid floor after a week's layoff. In the first game of the night, the rejuvenated St. Ann's five will play the high-scoring Moose and in the night-cap George Hermann's Odd Fellows will line up against the Third Ward A. C.

The "Saints" are expected to give the Mooers a close fight in tonight's tilt, having strengthened their line-up by the acquisition of a player from the University of Florida and a center from the Langhorne High School. The Moose is standing pat on its lineup.

Third Ward's scoring power has been increased by the signing of Ralph Cahall who several seasons ago starred for the Bristol High School team. With Cahall in the lineup, Manager Della now feels that his quintet will hand the Oddies their first reverse in three starts.

The opening tap-off will take place at eight o'clock.
